Above all, I am deeply indebted to all knowledge co-producers in India who shared their work, time, thoughts, sorrows and joys with me and went with me through this research process. My special thanks go to Navkiran Natt, Prarthna Singh, Ita Mehrotra and Srijani Datta. However, the co-production of knowledge took place not only in collaboration with the people I interviewed and interacted with in the process of ‘field research’ and ‘data collection’ but also with the many colleagues in Delhi, Mumbai and Berlin who listened and read parts of the findings and shared their feedback at various points in the process.

This book would not have been possible without the funding of the Berlin University Alliance project ‘Beyond Social Cohesion: Global Repertoires of Living Together’ (RePLITO). RePLITO is an exploration project funded in the framework of the Grand Challenge Initiative Social Cohesion by the Berlin University Alliance (2021–2024) by the Federal Ministry of Education and Research (BMBF) and the state of Berlin under the Excellence Strategy of the Federal Government and the Länder.

Colleagues from RePLITO and the Department of Gender and Media Research for the South Asian Region at the Institute of Asian and African Studies at Humboldt-Universität zu Berlin have enriched this work to a particular extent with their insightful comments and by reviewing earlier versions of two chapters via the collaborative publishing platform PubPub (a great invention!), with which we created our RePLITO Digital Knowledge Archive.<sup>1</sup> I am particularly grateful to Nadja-Christina Schneider for her continuous support, our many collaborations and our joint attempt to humanise academia through feminist solidarity over more than a decade.

I would also like to thank my dear friend and colleague Maria Framke, who accompanied me throughout the entire process, organised a workshop with me in collaboration with ICAS:MP in Delhi and a panel at the 27th Euro-

And finally, it was my family who provided me with a loving base for this project and even accompanied me on my research trip to India. Thank you, Silvio, Johan and Anton!
