

Acknowledgements

This book presents the results of my research carried out as a member of the Vārāṇasī Research Project at the South Asia Institute in Heidelberg. In December 2005 it has been submitted as habilitation thesis to the Faculty of Philosophy, University of Heidelberg. In the present form minor changes as well as corrections and additions have been incorporated. It is my pleasure to thank the following people who contributed to this book:

In Heidelberg, the members of the Vārāṇasī Research Project at the South Asia Institute. I am especially grateful to Axel Michaels for his constant support, encouragement, and patience while supervising the project. Niels Gutschow for sharing his extraordinary spatial knowledge, for the stimulating exchange, and the maps and drawings prepared by him and Anil Basukala for the present study. Martin Gaenszle for numerous discussions regarding the social and historical context of religious cartography. Joachim K. Bautze with whom I was able to discuss art historical aspects of the collected material. Birgit Mayer-König for her contributions to the “Benares Arbeitskreis”, and especially the study of the map Kāśīdarpaṇa. Stefan Schütte for sharing the material collected in Banaras, as well as his experiences on the road there with pilgrims. Michaela Dimmers, research assistant in both Heidelberg and Banaras, who has taken much more interest in the content of my research project than I could have hoped.

In Banaras Rana P. B. Singh for sharing, from the very beginning, his vast scholarship on the sacred topography of Banaras. Kedarnāth Vyās for allowing us to profit in countless ways from his extraordinary knowledge of sacred places and pilgrimage practice. Shashank Singh for showing us his collection of treasures and allowing us to photograph and photocopy them. Bettina Bäumer and Sadānanda Dās for their constant support in my attempts to locate sources in Banaras. Ramāpada Carkravartī for his assistance in the search for manuscripts at the Sarasvatībhavana Library. The director and staff of the Ramnagar Palace Library for allowing me access to the library. Hemant Sarna and Beat Niederer for their assistance in Banaras. Finally, my friend Rakesh Singh for his companionship and encouraging interest in vexing issues such as old and new roads.

My thanks to Susan Gole, who from the earliest stages of the project, shared her vast experience in the field of Indian cartography. She has generously provided the references for the painted maps at the Victoria & Albert Museum, London as well as the National Museum in New Delhi. I would like to express my thanks to the staff of the Picture Library of the Victoria & Albert Museum and especially to Rosemary Crill, Indian & South-East Asian Department, who provided invaluable assistance when I studied the Stylised Map of Vārāṇasī. Andrew Topsfield made the printed maps of Banaras in the collection of the Ashmolean Museum, Oxford accessible and at a later stage provided information regarding illuminated manuscripts of Banaras. I would like to thank Aditya Malik for his assistance while I was searching for maps in New Delhi. I am extremely grateful to Dr. Daljeet Singh, Keeper-in-Charge of the Department of Painting at the National Museum, New Delhi, and the staff of the department for their assistance along with the time they gave me to sit and study the map Pilgrims in Banaras. I should also like to thank Vasudha Dalmia who was involved in my encounter with Banaras at various stages. Most recently she searched her collection on Bhāratendu Hariścandra for a copy of the Pañcakrośī ke mārg kā vicār. My thanks to David Whizin, as well, for editing this English manuscript and to Quoc-Bao Do for his invaluable technical assistance while finalizing the book.

Jörg Gengnagel

Tübingen / Heidelberg, July 2011