There are a number of people without whom this thesis might not have been written, and to whom I am greatly indebted.

I am immensely grateful to Professor Juneja for accepting me as her doctoral student. This generous acceptance allowed me the possibility to make the lateral shift from an arts professional background towards undertaking research. I would like to sincerely thank her for her insightful and critical comments in my presentations and for her encouragement, patience and guidance in the completion of this thesis. I would like to thank both my supervisors, Prof. Juneja and Prof. Brosius for providing me with opportunities to present my research. My heartfelt thanks to Prof. Dave-Mukherji who helped to clarify my understanding of the Indian art scene and gave it direction.

I owe a lot to the three immensely talented artists who have formed the focus of this study, Chitra Ganesh, Tejal Shah and Nikhil Chopra. In their busy nomadic schedules, they made time to patiently answer my questions in innumerable conversations in Goa, Delhi, Paris and Munich. All three artists have generously shared the images for the works that form part of this thesis. I am also grateful to India Book House for generously sharing images from the Amar Chitra Katha comics.

Thanks are also due to Nicole Merkel and Dr. Eleonore Schmitt at the South Asia Institute Library Heidelberg for their support in obtaining publications and providing quiet spaces to complete the manuscript work. I am deeply indebted to Prof. Nadja-Christina Schneider for her acceptance of my manuscript as part of the Media and Cultural Studies series at HASP and for her valuable insights in the editing of my manuscript. I am also very grateful for the support of the HASP team in the publication of this work.

This research has been a long journey of learning and discovery, an endeavor of this magnitude would not have been possible if my family and friends had not encouraged and supported me every step along the way. A big thank you to the Fischer family, without whom there would have been no home away from home. And lastly, I am deeply grateful for the support of my family, my husband Rajbir
