There is only Chen Zuo'er left as deputy director now. According to Ming Pao, Chen will be in charge of Macau and economic affairs.

Xu Ze, under the age of 50, is famous for his intimate knowledge of Hong Kong and his capability of handling affairs. His parents are communist cadres who came south from the northern part of China with the army during the Civil War. Xu Ze went to school in Guangzhou and speaks Cantonese fluently. Zhou Chi, general manager of Shanghai Airlines, was appointed president of the new China Sky Aviation Enterprises Group. (XNA, 10 May 01) Six Chinese local airlines have recently formed an alliance to better compete in an increasingly fierce market. Members of the new China Sky Aviation Enterprises Group are the Shandong Airlines, Shanghai Airlines, Shenzhen Airlines, Sichuan Airlines, Wuhan Airlines and the China Post Airlines. According to sources at Shanghai Airlines, member airlines will seek to expand cooperation but will remain independent corporate bodies. They want to operate joint air routes, link their routes to facilitate transfers, jointly develop an e-commerce platform, cross-agent and cooperation in ground services, and share airplanes and other resources. Soon, the members will begin code-sharing on major routes and develop cargo post services, the sources said. The group now owns nearly 100 planes and operates over 500 routes. It handled more than eight million passengers and earned a profit of eight billion RMBY in 2000, accounting for 12 percent and 35 percent of the national total, respectively. Local airlines came into prominence in the mid-1980s, with 35 airlines operating at one point. But their numbers have been dwindling due to continuous restructuring of the industry. The latest round of mergers and acquisitions in the industry has further reduced the number of local airlines to less than 10. Besides the Sky Aviation, Hainan Airlines and Xinhua Airlines have also entered an alliance. Zhou Chi claimed, that local airlines still have room for development even under the new market system, and that the group will seek to expand the alliance to include other local airlines.

China signed UN treaty restricting toxic chemicals. Environment ministers and officials from 90 countries signed a UN treaty on 23rd May in Stockholm outlawing and restricting the use of a dozen toxic chemicals. Under the treaty, all the signatories will adopt a unified action to eliminate the 12 toxic chemicals. Ten of the 12 toxic chemicals are reportedly man-made ones and the rest two - dioxin and furan - are by-products in the industrial procedures. But as the first step, all the signatories must stop production and use of the toxic chemicals and are encouraged to produce new non-toxic chemicals to replace them. The 10 man-made toxic chemicals include DDT [dichlorodiphenyltrichloroethane], heptachlor and toxaphene. Also at the convention, jointly sponsored by the UN Environment Programme and the Swedish government, more than 30 other countries, together with the 90 signatories, signed a final document of the Stockholm on Persistent Organic Pollutants (POPs), supporting to wipe out all kinds of POPs. After the signing of the document, Chinese Deputy Director of the State Environmental Protection Administration (National Environment Protection Agency) Zhu Guangyao elaborated China's stance on POPs. China signed the treaty. "The Chinese government has always attached great importance to the control of chemical pollutants and has issued a string of laws to put under control some POPs," Zhu said. "POPs are a global environmental problem that requires joint efforts by all countries. ... Both developed and developing countries should shoulder responsibility for eliminating POPs," he said, adding that developed countries should provide funds and transfer relevant technologies to developing countries in this regard. The treaty must be ratified by at least 50 countries to become effective. Klaus Topfer, executive director of the UN Environment Programme, said he hoped the treaty would go into force at the UN human environment convention in the coming fall in South Africa. (XNA, 24 May 01)

CPI(A), CPI(B) and CPI(C) are compiled based on the expenditure patterns of households in the relatively low, medium and relatively high expenditure ranges respectively. A Composite CPI is compiled based on the overall expenditure pattern of all the above households taken together. The CPI(C) was formerly known as the Hang Seng CPI and was compiled by the Hang Seng Bank since 1974. Starting from the reference month of July 1999, the data collection and compilation work of the index have been taken up by the Census and Statistics Department and the index has been renamed as CPI(C).
