Chairmen and vice-chairmen of autonomous regional governments are equivalent to governors and vice-governors of provinces and to mayors and vice-mayors of Beijing, Chongqing, Shanghai and Tianjin. Year and month behind a name indicate the date the person assumed the post or was identified in this position.

A revamped China Telecom and China Netcom have officially launched in Beijing on 16th May under their new names of China Telecom Corporation and China Netcom Communication Group Corporation respectively. With the founding of both corporations, the restructuring of China's telecommunications industry is nearing completion. According to the state telecom structural reform plan, the former China Telecom was split into southern and northern parts. The new China Telecom Corporation is still entitled to retain the goodwill and intangible assets of "China Telecom", maintain business in 21 provinces and cities in southern and north-western China and hold 70 per cent of the national trunk line transmission network assets owned by the former China Telecom. The 10 northern provincial corporations of the former China Telecom including those in the provinces of Henan, Shandong and Northeastern provinces, together with the former China Netcom, and Jitong Communications Corporation, merged into the new China Netcom Communication Group Corporation, holding 30 per cent of the national trunk line transmission network assets. Both new corporations have now become two fixed line telephone network enterprises with equal capacity in China's telecommunications market. The two companies both have complete domestic long-distance trunk transmission networks and local telephone networks in their own areas and they are also allowed to build and operate local telephone networks in each other's areas. After the overhaul of China's telecommunications enterprises, the market is now shared by six corporations, namely China Telecom Corporation, China Netcom Communication Group Corporation, China Mobile, China Unicom, China Satcom and China Railcom. China will gradually open its telecommunications market to foreign capital in years ahead fulfilling its promises upon entering the World Trade Organization (WTO), which will undoubtedly bring keen competition to a market currently dominated by Chinese ventures. In order to increase the strength of domestic firms for future competition, the Chinese government has been reforming its telecommunications industry since November last year. (RMRB, XNA, 17 May 02)

PRC Laws and Regulations

Labour Protection Regulation Regarding Use of Poisonous Goods At Work Sites, adopted at the 57th meeting of the State Council Standing Conference on 30 April 2002. This regulation will take effect from the day of promulgation. (Order No. 352 of the State Council, signed by Premier Zhu Rongji on 12 May 2002) (Xinhua, 19 May 02, in BBC PF, 21 May 02; full text: RMRB, 26 May 02) The regulation consists of eight chapters with 71 articles.

A new regulation issued by China's State Council was enforced on 19th May to help improve the health of employees working with poisonous and dangerous materials. China Daily reported that the regulation is expected to reduce the increasing number of diseases brought about by poisonous materials in the working place. For example, the regulation ensures workers' right to have complete understanding of the dangers of their work and any employers found violating these rights will be severely punished. Also, employers are required to provide safety conditions and necessary equipment to guarantee the safety to their workers. Officials from the Ministry of Health were quoted by the newspaper as saying that China's occupational diseases have become very "serious." This new regulation provides workers with a new legal weapon to protect their own rights. Around 1,166 cases of chronic poisoning cases were registered in the country last year with millions employees working with poor protection measures. Most of the poisoning accidents took place in small and medium-sized firms and in particular in private firms. Officials say that the new regulation will not only force employers to improve working conditions, but will also give workers more legal rights to prevent occupational diseases and enable them to receive compensation. (XNA, 21 May 02)

Regulation on governing the demarcation lines of administrative divisions. (Order No. 353 of the State Council, signed by Premier Zhu Rongji on 13 May 2002) (Full text: RMRB, 24 May 02)

Premier Zhu Rongji has issued a decree to reinforce the demarcation of China's internal boundaries. Coming into effect on 1 July, the 20-article regulation aims to consolidate the country's first demarcation of 62,000 km of provincial borders and 416,000 km of county boundaries, and to maintain the social stability around the demarcated borders. The regulation stipulates that governments at various levels must strictly abide by the demarcation agreements. Individuals or organizations face prosecution if they change, move or destroy the borders arbitrarily. If a boundary stone must be removed or added for reasons like construction or development, neighbouring local governments must consult on a joint survey with the results submitted to higher authorities for file and approval. The regulation says that the Ministry of Civil Affairs will be totally responsible for the general management of domestic boundaries. And local civil affair departments above county level must assume their duty in managing boundaries. (XNA, 24 May 02)

Procedures for Chinese Citizens Travelling Abroad for Tourism, adopted at the 50th meeting of the State Council Standing Conference on 12 December 2001. The procedures will become effective as of 1 July 2002. (Order No. 354 of the State Council, signed by Premier Zhu Rongji on 27 May 2002) (Full text: RMRB, 7 June 02)

China released on 3rd June a new regulation governing Chinese tourists travelling abroad. The 33-article regulation stipulates that foreign tourism destination countries should be decided by China's tourism authorities with the approval of the State Council, China's cabinet. About 20 destination countries have been selected, including major member countries of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, Japan, the Republic of Korea, Australia, New Zealand, Egypt and Turkey. The rule also stipulates that travel agencies providing foreign tourism services should meet the following requirements:

- Agencies must have held international travel service qualifications for at least one year.

- Agencies should have achieved outstanding accomplishments in organizing visits of foreign tourists to China.

- And such agencies must not have been involved in any major unlawful practices or had serious problems in service quality.

The regulation also requires travel agencies to safeguard the legitimate rights and interests of tourists. When providing foreign tourism service, organizing travel agencies should sign contracts with tourists, which include travel itineraries, prices, food, accommodations, transportation as well as their responsibilities in case of breach of contract. (XNA, 5 June 02)

China issued a new regulation for public bidding on land use. The Ministry of Land and Resources issued a regulation on 15th May requiring public bidding on land use to be carried out in a uniform way. During a four-year pilot phase to mobilize local governments to transfer the right to use state-owned land through public bidding, the ministry allowed different regions to design their own bidding procedures under the country's "Land Law" and the "Law of Urban Real Estate Management". But because the procedures varied from one region to another, investors were constantly having to adapt. The new regulation would stipulate every step of a "valid" public bidding and would be especially welcomed by foreign investors because it mirrors rules used in the world market, said an official. The new regulation ensures fairness by requiring bidding information to be released 20 days beforehand, providing the same references to all qualified bidders, making collective decisions and publishing bidding results for the public. Besides, the public bidding will be automatically stopped if there are less than three bidders for a single piece of land. (RMRB, XNA, 17 May 02)

China's Ministry of Culture (MOC) on 16th May announced regulations tightening the management of Internet cafes and the Internet's

negative influences. The MOC is in charge of Internet bars and relevant service providers who trade creative works, videos, Internet games and performances through Internet technology. An official said that currently some Internet cafes illegally traded in contraband videos, and auctioned and sold pirated works of art. Some Internet cafes offered on-line games featuring pornography, gambling, violence and fetishism, and some unlicensed premises even allowed in minors, which totally violated Chinese law. The MOC regulations involve not only specific requirements for setting up Internet cafes, but also certifications for cafe proprietors and entry registration for consumers. Under the regulations, minors may enter Internet cafes only during school holidays and stay on-line for three hours at most. Those under 16 years of age can go to Internet bars only with teachers. MOC will also join other government administrations in developing professional software to safeguard China's Internet service. Availability of the Internet as represented by the cafes, has grown rapidly in China in recent years. Provisional figures show that by the end of this March, China had 200,000 Internet cafes. But around 17,000 have so far been closed down due to illegal activities, and 28,000 have applied for licenses. (XNA, 17 May 02; RMRB, 18 May 02)

China issued on 20th May a regulation to help clarify the ownership of intellectual property rights (IPR) for significant research projects. China Daily (21 May) said that IPR ownership of major scientific projects – except those related to national security and important social benefits – will be granted to those who actually carry out the research project. Under the new regulation approved by the State Council, scientists or their backers are free to decide how to transfer or commercialize their technological findings. The issue of the regulation aims to enhance the awareness of IPR protection and stimulate technology invention and commercialization, said Shi Dinghuan, secretary-general of the Ministry of Science and Technology. Research institutes with financial difficulties in patent application and protection will be given special grants to let them sustain patent protection from government allocation for scientific projects, the officials said. "Some research institutes still neglect IPR protection and only care about the evaluation of technology and publication of academic papers," he noted, adding that ignorance of patent application has caused a great number of overlapping projects and a waste of resources. The country has produced an average of 30,000 important technological findings each year since the 1990s but only a small part of these are registered for patent protection. (RMRB, 21 May 02; XNA, 22 May 02)

Note: Since August 2000, the „resident population“ approach has been adopted in place of the „extended de facto approach for compiling population estimates. In the above table, statistics which are population-related have been revised accordingly and annotated with **. CPI (A), CPI(B) and CPI(C) are compiled based on the expenditure patterns of households in the relatively low, medium and relatively high expenditure ranges respectively. A Composite CPI is compiled based on the overall expenditure pattern of all the above households taken together. The CPI(C) was formerly known as the Hang Seng CPI and was compiled by the Hang Seng Bank since 1974. Starting from the reference month of July 1999, the data collection and compilation work of the index have been taken up by the Census and Statistics Department and the index has been renamed as CPI(C).
