Regulation for Flight Control of General Aviation.

Chinese Premier Zhu Rongji and Central Military Commission Chairman Jiang Zemin have signed a decree regulating the country's general aviation industry. Sources say the regulation, formulated in accordance with internationally accepted practices, will help China make better use of its airspace, ensure aviation safety and ensure the smooth development of the country's general aviation activities. General aviation refers to all aviation activities with the exception of those related to the military, the police, customs and public transportation, the sources explained. It involves flights undertaken by a wide variety of sectors, including manufacturing, agriculture, forestry, fishery, mining and maritime monitoring and survey. It also includes flights related to scientific experiments, remote sensing surveys, sports and sightseeing. The regulation, which will take effect on 1 May, 2003, consists of seven chapters and 45 articles. All those engaged in general aviation activities in China are subject to the terms of the regulation. The regulation also applies to the release of free and unmanned air balloons and fixed balloons. Violations of regulation that cause serious consequences will be subject to criminal prosecution, the regulation stipulates. (XNA, 14/18 Jan 03) Regulations on the Management of Weapons and Equipment of the Chinese People's Liberation Army (PLA).

Jiang Zemin, chairman of the Central Military Commission (CMC), signed an order to promulgate the "Regulations" for Implementation. The "Regulations" have been formulated on the basis of the "Regulations on the Work of the Management of Weapons and Equipment of the Chinese PLA" promulgated by the CMC in 1990. The "Regulations" are divided into 15 chapters in 106 articles and have three appendixes. They clearly define the basic contents, basic procedures, basic requirements and basic methods of weapons and equipment management; contain new provisions on weapons and equipment management in training, war preparation and times of war, as well as in ceremonies for handing out and receiving weapons and equipment; add new connotations to the standards for making weapons and equipment management more scientific, institutionalized and regular; cover various aspects of the whole process from the reception of weapons and equipment to relieving them from military service and reporting them as worthless; and give full expression to the new situation, new characteristics and new requirements in weapons and equipment management of the armed forces under the new structure. China's Supreme People's Court (SPC) promulgated (on 3 January) a new regulation to correct and curb illegal activities relating to enterprise restructuring and better protect creditors' and employees' legitimate rights and interests. According to the regulation, effective February 1 this year, civil parties involved in disputes resulting from the restructuring of enterprises will be able to file a civil suit in court. Such disputes may result from the merger. sale or split-up of an enterprise, debt to equity swaps, or the conversion of a state-owned enterprise into a corporation or joint-stock company, the regulation says. With the deepening of China's state-owned enterprise restructuring, new problems beyond the scope of current laws and regulations are arising, SPC Vice-President Li

Guoguang said at a press conference. Li said that the new regulation, which covers all the problems that have emerged thus far in China's enterprise restructuring, will guide the work of Chinese courts in this regard and provide a strong legal guarantee for the restructuring process. "This regulation will protect the results of China's enterprise restructuring more effectively and play a positive role in maintaining enterprise and social stability," he said. In addition, the protection of employees' interests is one of the regulation's objectives, Li said. He asked China's courts at various levels to pay special attention to the protection of the legitimate rights and interests of employees in enterprises to be restructured, adding that the courts should firmly stop any illegal activities related to enterprise restructuring and tolerate no actions detrimental to the interests of employees. China's Supreme People's Court (SPC) on 9 January issued regulations dealing with stock trading fraud (in 27 articles) caused by false messages released by listed companies, while nearly 900 such cases are already piled high on the desks of Chinese judges nationwide. Of the 900 lawsuits, only two had been settled through court mediation, and the rest were pending, said Li Guoguang, SPC vice-president, at a press conference on the new regulations. All those lawsuits involve no more than 10 listed companies. The compensation to a plaintiff, if the defendant is found to have committed a fraud, will include his losses from the transactions and other fees incurred, for instance, commission and tax, the regulations say. However, courts should encourage parties involved to resolve their disputes through mediation and negotiation, which was more economical for both sides, said the vice-president. But according to the regulations, litigants can take their case to court only after the China Securities Regulatory Commission or its branches, government bodies or the courts have decided a fraud has been committed. And cases handled are limited to the dissemination of false and misleading information by listed companies, stock exchanges and other institutions, which caused investors to incur losses. The regulations were especially made to protect the interests of individual investors, because they were usually at a disadvantage when hit by stock trading fraud, and their morale and confidence was key to the development of the country's securities market, Li said. Since China's stock market re-opened 12 years ago, the country had 1,200 listed companies and 68 million registered investors, and the stock market was worth 4.3 trillion RMBY by October last year. The People's Bank of China, China's central bank, issued a regulation to combat money laundering on 13 January. According to the regulation, which will take effect on 1 March of this year, financial institutions and their employees will be obligated to participate in the fight against money laundering, maintain the confidentiality of anti-money laundering information and cooperate with law enforcement officials in anti-money laundering efforts. According to the regulation, customers opening a savings account or settling accounts will be required to present proper identification. Employees will check the identification documents and register the names and other information. It stipulates that financial institutions failing to comply with their new responsibilities will be subject to prosecution. (XNA, 14 Jan 03)

The People's Bank of China on 14 January announced a procedure for reporting large-sum and suspicious payment trading in the Chinese currency Renminbi (RMB). The move is aimed to enhance the supervision on payment trading in RMB, standardize reports on RMB payment trading, and ward off money laundering and other criminal activities by means of payments and clearing through banks, a bank spokesman said. He said RMB payment trading referred to money payments and capital clearing by both institutions and individuals in their social and economic activities, which can occur via bills, bank cards, remittance, collection and acceptance, authorized collection, on-line payment and cash. The procedure provides a detailed description of large-sum and suspicious payment trading, and spells out specific penalties for counter activities. The procedure will come into effect on 1 March 2003. (XNA, 15 Jan 03)

The People's Bank of China on 15 January promulgated the procedure governing financial institutions' reporting of large or suspicious foreign currency transactions, in a bid to monitor foreign exchange trading and standardize reports. Under the procedure, financial institutions conducting foreign exchange businesses in China should report any large-sum and suspicious foreign exchange trading to the state's foreign exchange administrative departments. The procedure provides detailed descriptions of such trading and spells out specific penalties for counter activities. The procedure, which consist of 22 articles, will come into effect on March 1 this year. (XNA, 16 Jan 03; Xinhua, 28 Jan 03, in BBC PF, 12 Feb (03)

A new interim regulation for the management of China's foreign debt will be effective 1 March. Jointly issued by the State Development Planning Commission (SDPC), the Ministry of Finance, and the State Administration of Foreign Exchange, the document provides guidelines relating to the use, repayment and supervision of foreign debt. It also provides definitions and classifications. As a major form of foreign capital utilization, foreign loans have played an active role in spurring the development of China's economy. The security of foreign debt is crucial to the sound functioning of the national economy and to the stability of the financial system. An official with the SDPC said the regulation will help to improve the relevant legal framework, standardize the management of the country's foreign loans and reduce foreign debt-related risks. CPI (A), CPI(B) and CPI(C) are compiled based on the expenditure patterns of households in the relatively low, medium and relatively high expenditure ranges respectively. A Composite CPI is compiled based on the overall expenditure pattern of all the above households taken together. The CPI(C) was formerly known as the Hang Seng CPI and was compiled by the Hang Seng Bank since 1974. Starting from the reference month of July 1999, the data collection and compilation work of the index have been taken up by the Census and Statistics Department and the index has been renamed as CPI(C).
