In a statement released by the WHO regional office in Manila, Omi said China is among 11 countries in the Western Pacific to have signed the treaty, a first step to ratification. "The next step is for China to ratify the convention as soon as possible, and move towards effective implementation," he said. The legally binding treaty, the world's first on public health, was passed by the WHO general assembly in May after nearly four years of negotiations. The treaty imposes comprehensive bans on tobacco advertising, bans the use of misleading terms such as "light" and "mild" cigarettes, raises tobacco taxes, and protects non-smokers from exposure to tobacco use in the workplace and public places. Worldwide, 77 countries have signed, and five - Fiji, Malta, Norway, the Marshall Islands, Seychelles and Sri Lanka - have ratified the convention, the statement said. (XNA, 21 Nov 03)

Regulations of the People's Republic of China on Import and Export Duties, approved by the 26th executive meeting of the State Council on 29 October 2003. These regulations shall enter into force as from 1 January 2004. (Decree No. 392 of the State Council, signed by Premier Wen Jiabao on 23 November 2003) (Xinhua, 29 Nov 03, in BBC PF, 30 Nov 03; full text: RMRB, 3 Dec 03) The provisions, which are composed of six chapters and 67 articles, cover the areas of custom duty rates, pricing of post-tax export and import goods, and imposing of custom duties and exports tax. Xinhua News Agency published a commentator's article on 29 November, hailing it as an effort for China to fulfill its promises made for its entry into the World Trade Organization (WTO), by improving the custom taxation system in accordance with the law. It is of great significance for the implementation of regularization of the levy and payment of custom duties, securing the revenue from customs tariffs, and safeguarding the rights of tax-payers, the commentator stressed. China's entry into the WTO has brought about lots of new opportunities and challenges to the country, and, as a result, it has raised new and higher demands on the work of the customs department, the article noted. (XNA, 30 Nov 03)

Regulations on the Safety and Production Management of Construction Projects, approved at the 28th executive meeting of the State Council on 12 November 2003. These regulations will take effect on 1 February 2004. (Decree No. 393 of the State Council, signed by Premier Wen Jiabao on 24 November 2003) (Xinhua, 6 Dec 03, in BBC PF, 7 Dec 03)

Regulations on Tollway Management (Draft). The executive meeting of the State Council on 26 November discussed the draft of the provisions on tollway management. The draft will be published in newspapers and the Internet to seek public opinion before it is promulgated by the State Council. (XNA, 26 Nov 03; full text of the draft: RMRB, 29 Nov 03)

Revised regulation prevents single Chinese women from getting test-tube babies. Single women are prohibited from getting pregnant through assisted human reproductive technology like "test-tube baby" technology, according to a newly-revised regulation by the Ministry of Health. The Technological Criteria, Basic Standards and Ethical Principles on Human Assisted Reproductive Technology also forbids married couples from using the technology to get triplets or more in pregnancy and twins in gestation should be avoided. The regulation urges all the medical institutions and personnel using the technology to offer better service and strictly abide by the state's family planning policy so as to minimize the negative impact of the technology on society, ethics and law. Identity cards, marriage certificates and birth permits of infertile couples should be checked in order to prevent inappropriate use of the technology by unqualified couples and single women. Related medical institutions across the country are now making efforts to meet the new requirements, the ministry said. (XNA, 6 Nov 03)

China's top public prosecutors' office, the Supreme People's Procuratorate (SPP), announced on 25 November that a new regulation has been worked out to prevent unlawful prolonged custody of criminal suspects. Zhang Zhongfang, a spokesperson for the SPP, said that by 21 July, 359 unlawful prolonged detention cases had been redressed. And eight supervision groups were then dispatched to 24 provinces to look for any possible new cases. To date, another 16 cases of unlawful prolonged custody were spotted again nationwide and all have been dealt with. Zhang noted that in a bid to fundamentally eliminate unlawful extended detention, a long-term supervision system on law enforcement officials must be established. The new regulation would require law enforcement officials to take a more prudent attitude when arresting criminal suspects. And if the criminal case could not be checked within the time limit of custody, law enforcement officials must free the criminal suspect or apply to extend the detention by strictly following the relevant law and regulations. The regulation also requires that law enforcement departments conduct interrogation within 24 hours of arrest and should inform the suspects of the cause of detention, and tell the dates of the beginning and end of the detention to the suspect as well as his relatives or work unit, so that if the custody is unlawfully extended, relatives of the suspect could appeal. According to the regulation, any law enforcement officers who abuse their power and cause a criminal suspect's detention to be illegally extended must bear disciplinary or criminal responsibility. Zhang said the regulation helps build a long-term supervisory system which could protect the human rights of criminal suspects and demonstrates that China's judicial body not only devotes itself to cracking down on crime, but highly respects human rights. It occurs sometimes that criminal suspects are held at detention centres until the court makes its final verdict. This means that the police, public prosecutors and judges could all illegally hold a suspect in custody for longer than is allowed. The legal period of custody of criminal suspects ranges from 14 days to six-and-a-half-months from the arrest to the trial, according to China's Criminal Procedure Law. As of last week, there were still more than 3,600 unlawfully prolonged custody cases existing in the country's detention centres, all of which are expected to be dealt with before the end of this year, according to the sources of the SPP. (XNA, 25 Nov 03)

Permanent residents in Hong Kong and Macau with Chinese nationality will be able to enter for the national judicial exam and apply for official certification as a lawyer from 1 January 2004. The Ministry of Justice on 30 November issued a regulation enabling Hong Kong and Macau residents to become certified lawyers on the Chinese main- land. Another three relevant regulations were also issued on 30 November, including one defining how Hong Kong and Macau residents can start businesses on the Chinese mainland after obtaining certification as a lawyer; one regarding how Hong Kong and Macau lawyers with local certifications can be hired by Mainland law firms; and another concerning joint ventures between Hong Kong, Macau and mainland law firms. All the regulations will take effect from 1 January next year. The ministry spokeswoman told Xinhua that the documents supported the Mainland and Hong Kong Closer Economic Partnership Arrangement (CEPA) and Mainland and Macau CEPA, which promised to open the legal service market on the Chinese mainland to Hong Kong and Macau. CPI (A), CPI(B) and CPI(C) are compiled based on the expenditure patterns of households in the relatively low, medium and relatively high expenditure ranges respectively. A Composite CPI is compiled based on the overall expenditure pattern of all the above households taken together. The CPI(C) was formerly known as the Hang Seng CPI and was compiled by the Hang Seng Bank since 1974. Starting from the reference month of July 1999, the data collection and compilation work of the index have been taken up by the Census and Statistics Department and the index has been renamed as CPI(C).
