Mauritania

The "Nouakchott Friendship Port" built with Chinese aid was handed over on Sep 16, 1986.
(XNA, Sep 16, 1986)
It is the most ambitious African aid project undertaken by China in Africa since Chinese involvement in the building of Tanzania-Zambian railway. The man-made deepwater port, situated 15 kilometers from the capital of Nouakchott, was selected, designed and constructed by Chinese engineers and workers and completed one year ahead of schedule. The total cost, paid for by long-term interest-free loans, is put at 150 million U.S.dollars. There was no geological information available when the project was begun. While strong currents, heavy surf and the serious threat of silting required a breakwater 800 metres long, made out of 80,000 concrete pilings driven into the sea by hundreds of Chinese workers. The first stone was laid in April 1979. The 26,900-square-metre port was regularly buffeted up to six metres (200 feet) high and constant sandstorms blew 400,000 to 700,000 cubic metres of silt a year into the harbor basin during its construction. Another problem was that the total of 500,000 cubic metres of stone and construction materials needed to build the port had to be shipped from a distance of 120 km away. For Mauritania, trapped between the Atlantic Ocean and the Sahara desert, the port will be an economic lifesaver. As one of the world's poorest countries, it must currently bring all its imports through Dakar in neighbouring Senegal, 600 kilometres away. The port will be able to simultaneously handle three ships of between 10,000 and 15,000 tons each and will provide another outlet to the sea for Mauritania's landlocked western neighbour, Mali.

The fund for the project will be provided by Federal Germany as a gift. The highway is a trunk line linking the capital with four provinces, crossing three mountains. The highway is expected to handle heavier traffic when the project is completed.
(XNA, Sep 7, 1986)
