1975, Jan. Elected Deputy Prime Minister and Minister for Public Security by the 4th National People's Congress

1976, Feb. Identified as Acting Prime Minister

Remarks:

Hua's rise to the top of Party leadership cannot be directly explained from the biographical data as specified above. There is no indication of his having excelled as a worker activist or in any similar capacity like all of the younger generation of cadres. On the other hand, Hua's activities in Shaoshan, Mao Tse-tung's place of birth, and the fact that he was received by Mao Tse-tung in September 1967 may well prove to be keys to his rise. This suggests that, for reasons we have not yet been able to identify, there may be a special relationship between Mao and Hua.
